Hundreds get revenge — clean the mountain

Nearly 300 residents of San Mateo County scooped up vast amounts of garbage from the slopes of San Bruno Mountain last weekend during "Mountain Revenge 1979" — the county's first massive cleanup of the unincorporated area.

Ron Weaver, the county ranger who coordinated the project, said volunteers ranged in age from 3 to 76 years old and were very enthusiastic.

They picked up 200 cubic yards of trash during the Friday-Sunday campaign, including mattresses, dishwashers, water heaters, fenders, shoes, clothing, a camper shell, television sets, a broken arm cast, bags of crushed aluminum, a barbecue and, yes, even the kitchen sink.

Weaver said participants salvaged some of the items for their own use. One man found a shirt that he liked and another county ranger found a pair of boots just his size.

Some children made off with bundles of costume jewelry that had been discarded.

Weaver said the glass and metal found will be recycled but he's still trying to find a use for about 300 old tires that were hauled off the mountain.

Coors is paying higher rates than usual for recycled aluminum picked off the mountain or donated to the cleanup effort. Persons who wish to donate their recycled aluminum to the project may drop it off at Coors West, 890 Broadway, Redwood City, or at Matagrano's, Inc., 610 Quarry Road, Belmont.

Volunteers came from every community in the county, but the heaviest turnout was from the North County. Forty percent of the volunteers were from Daly City.

Among the groups participating were the Daly City Clean Community Center, the Save San Bruno Mountain Committee, the St. Andrews Catholic Church youth group, Campfire Girls, 4-H Clubs, two Boy Scout Explorer Posts and the California Department of Forestry.

McDonalds, Pizza Hut, Pepsi Cola, Budweiser, Coors and Rolling Pin Donuts provided food and beverage to volunteers. The National Guard supplied water and the San Mateo County Transit District transported volunteers up and down the mountain.

Volunteers were given souvenir "Mountain Revenge 1979" T-shirts.

On hand to give support were Smokey the Bear and "Old Cal," the California Solid Waste Management Board's environmental representative who dresses like a Forty-Niner gold panner.

Winner of the $100 donated to a drawing by Supervisor James Fitzgerald was a Brisbane youngster, John Whitney.

Other drawing prizes were two Giants game tickets, donated by the Daly City Chamber of Commerce, and a large stuffed lion donated by Lyons' Restaurant.

Weaver said barriers will be erected and patrols of the mountain will be stepped up to prevent littering in the future.

Weaver has more county-wide litter projects in mind, including cleanups of beaches and Canada Road.

He was delighted with the success of the first effort. "People were so great. They kept asking me, 'When can we go this again?'" he said.

Long agenda for next regular meet

It took the Daly City City Council 22 minutes to go over a long agenda Monday night, with the only thing decided at the end being that there would be a long agenda for next Monday night's regular meeting.

The council listened attentively to some revisions in the plan of the proposed 51-unit Serramonte Unit 22 subdivision, a mixture of townhouses along Morton Drive at Penhurst Avenue and single-family homes on a new Penhurst Court and on a privately-maintained street behind Morton.

Architect Andy Cresci, a representative of the developer, Suburban Realty Co. of San Francisco, pointed out that some of the homes on the 8.9-acre parcel would have no back yards because of the 16-degree hillside slope behind them, which he called unavoidable "site conditions."

The city Planning Commission approved the concept Aug. 14 and the council will take up preliminary plan approval next week.

Of particular concern to the council was drainage off the hillside. Councilman William Schumacher said he would prefer a catch-basin behind every unit, while Councilman Albert Teglia observed that as has happened in other subdivisions when fences are built across runoff drains, "Somebody gets flooded."

Present plans call for homes in the $80,000 to $90,000 range, Director of Development Don Fleming noted after the meeting. Suburban had set the land aside some time ago when it was thought the state Department of Transportation would buy the parcel for an interchange and grade separation at Hickey and Skyline boulevards, at the top of the hill above the development, but that didn't happen.

Next Monday's agenda also will feature nine public hearings. Among them will be the forfeiture of deposit on the sale of an old house at 201 Templeton Ave., part of the clearing operation for the Lincoln Park expansion. But a staff report this week said the area has been cleared on debris, as required by the city ordinance.

Only one house, at 967 Brunswick St., remains on the park expansion site, because the tenant has been unable to find other housing. But the staff report said other housing now has been found in Fairfield and that the Brunswick house should be vacated by the second week of September. The council must decide whether the house should be sold for removal or demolished.

Other public hearings will include a zone change to allow a nine-unit condominium development northwest of Crocker Avenue and Scenic Way, reports from the acting city engineer on weed and rubbish abatement on several properties, reprogramming of the city's fifth-year funding in Community Development Block Grant funds, and a zone change of a residential lot to light commercial to permit expansion of the Jack-in-the-Box restaurant at 7217 Mission St.

Neighbors have been wary about the expansion because of past noise and litter problems at night, and have asked that a planned driveway on Garibaldi Street be deleted from the plan.

Shadow of obscurity

The magic name of San Francisco has cast its spell over BART and once again has put Daly City into its dark shadow of obscurity.

BART announced last week it is changing its East Bay destination message boards to read "San Francisco" instead of "Daly City" on its westbound routes "for BART patrons who are not familiar with the Bay Area, but do know they want to go to San Francisco."

BART said tourists and newcomers have complained over the years that they have missed trains because they didn't know that Daly City-bound trains passed through San Francisco. The changeover should be completed within the next two weeks, BART said. Destination signs at the West Oakland station and those in San Francisco still will read "Daly City," however.

BART thus joins the Cow Palace as a "San Francisco" institution for visitors, though the Cow Palace is entirely within Daly City and BART's terminus is in the San Mateo County city.

City says merchants filed claim too late

Merchants who have taken legal action to stop the revitalization of downtown South San Francisco were too late in filing their cross-complaint.

That is the claim made by the city of South San Francisco, who responded Monday with an answer to that cross-complaint in San Mateo County Superior Court.

The document states the statute of limitations has been exceeded, and therefore the dissenting merchants do not have a legal right to ask that an assessment district be disbanded. The city asks that the lawsuit be dismissed.

Other highlights of the answer to the cross-complaint are that:

The Code of Civil Procedure forbids the merchants from taking legal action against the city because only the legislative body or the contractor may take such action.

Even if the cross-complaint were allowed, more than 60 days elapsed between the filing of the cross-complaint on June 25 and the City Council's final action on the assessment district April 18.

Court action cannot be taken against the formation of an assessment district unless a written protest was filed with the city at the appropriate time. A written protest was made, but it did not contain any specifics.

Two City Council members do not have a conflict of interest because they own property on a street that is not part of the assessment district, and the benefit they would derive from revitalization is the same any other resident would receive.

Revitalization plans call for Grand Avenue to be re-designed to encourage more pedestrian use of the congested street and less through traffic. Improvements would be made to the street and sidewalks, with a curved median dividing the street.

Individual property owners would be encouraged to make improvements to their own property by painting the buildings unifying colors, remodeling their storefronts and erecting awnings.

San Francisco attorney Robert Auwbrey filed the demurrers to the cross-complaint late Monday, just hours before the deadline for offering an answer would have expired.

A hearing in the Law/Motion Department has been set for Friday, Aug. 31 at 9 a.m.

This answer to the cross-complaint is in response to a class action lawsuit filed against the city by downtown property owners Ralph Smith and Edith Ferrari Plauche.

That cross-complaint seeks to stop formation of an assessment district of Grand Avenue property owners on the grounds that All Souls Catholic Church was illegally excluded from the district and that two council members did not disclose a possible conflict of interest.

Their action came in response to a routine validating suit the city had filed against downtown property owners to clear the way for levying the assessments.

Rather than proceeding ahead smoothly, a class action lawsuit against the city was filed. The city was to have responded by July 25, but a an extension until Aug. 20 was given by Superior Court Judge Thomas Jenkins.

Several weeks ago City Attorney John Noonan said it was his opinion that Mayor Terry Mirri and Councilwoman Roberta Teglia did not have a conflict of interest.

He said the pair owns property on Baden Avenue, a street running parallel to the one that will be revitalized. Even if they owned property within the assessment district, Noonan said they still could be eligible to vote.

Mirri announced at that time that he would abstain from all future votes on revitalization "rather than see this thing personalized."

He stressed he was not abstaining because he felt he had a conflict, but only because he wanted revitalization to proceed smoothly.

Councilwoman Teglia has refused to abstain, saying she will not "ride the fence" by not participating.

The merchants' lawsuit is just one of the problems that has been plaguing the project. Construction bids for the project came in 60 percent higher than estimated, with a low bid of $1.84 million.

Only 20 in jobs

CETA placement falling behind

By TERRY DAVENPORT
Post Staff Writer

They are the kind of jobs that most young adults are clamoring to find:

- Starting pay of $6.50 per hour working for an international airline, with fringe benefits that include flying privileges.
- Pay of $5.50 per hour for moving a car rental firm's cars to different locations. The company offers opportunities for advancement and will pay tuition for job-related courses taken by employees.
- A chance to learn the upholstery business while being paid $6.50 an hour. The only requirement is that applicants speak English.
- Starting wages of $200 per week for working on an electronics firm's assembly line. No high school degree or previous training is necessary. Pay rises to $300 per week after training.

San Mateo Training Programs, Inc., found these jobs and hundreds more like them this summer.

BUT the non-profit corporation, funded with a $78,528 grant under the federal Comprehensive and Training Act, has placed only 20 young adults in jobs since its three-month contract with San Mateo County began June 25.

The contract requires the corporation to place 50 persons in permanent jobs before the contract ends Sept. 25.

The penalty? San Mateo Training Programs doesn't get paid until it places applicants. Director Spencer Holeman figures the corporation will have to place 35 persons before it breaks even.

He explained that the county isn't paying for his company's expenses, including rent, utilities, gas, postage, and photocopying.

If it places 50 applicants, the company stands to receive $24,278 under the CETA contract. The rest of the $78,528 grant is to be used to pay half of each employee's salary during a three-month training period.

Thus, companies that hire persons through the CETA program get employees at half the usual cost for the first 90 days.

A camp-out at the lake

Daly City Girl Scouts are going to a day camp this week as part of their summer activities. There are crafts, games and fishing at Lake Merced in San Francisco. More than 50 local Brownie, Junior Cadette and Senior Girl Scouts from the Daly City-Colma area are involved in the camp. Among the youngsters are Hideko Akashi, who is cutting some carrots, and Annette Goley, who is stirring up some goodies.

Sorority wrapping up summer philanthropic projects

Members of the Beta Signma Chapter of Epsilon Sigma Alpha Sorority are wrappingup a variety of summer philanthropic projects, which included work for the St. Jude Research Hospital and volunteer work at the Hill Haven Convalescent Hospital in San Francisco.

Mrs. Lois Orent, chapter president, reports there will be little time for members to rest on their laurels, since the next meeting — only days away — will be, in part, to plan for the philanthropic projects that will be occupying members this fall. Mrs. Vivian Burg is scheduled to be hostess for the planning session in her San Francisco home.

All members are encouraged to attend.

THE BSC annual leadership convernece is being organized by district officers and Mrs. Orent hopes that many of the local chapter members will attend. The conference will be Sept. 30-Oct.1 at the Dream Inn of Santa Cruz.

MEMBERS of the Mary's Help Hospital Guild began their fall season with a meeting last Friday.

New members on hand to start the season were Mrs. George Bourboulis, Mrs. Warren Caffrey, Mrs. Lois Chulla, Mrs. William Emond, Mrs. Mary Grendroat, Mrs. Helen Gonez and Mrs. John Lewin.

Members of the guild's Boutique Committee remind that workers meet Thursdays in the West Pavilion of the hospital, creating gifts for the November boutique. A spokeswoman says additional workers are welcome.

Tax checks out

The first of what may be as many as 400,000 property tax and rent assistance checks are being mailed to recipients early this month under the Homeowner and Render Assistance Programs, according to State Controller Ken Cory.

State officials have estimated persons from as many as 970000 households may be eligible for the expanded program, but only 310,000 had been received by Aug. 1.

"The deadline for filing applications is the end of August and we are fearful that many persons who are over 62 or who are blind or disabled may not be aware of the program," Cory added.

The homeowners program, which may include as many as 370,000 households is open to those who are 62, own and occupy their own homes and who had less than $12,000 in total household income last year. Rent assistance is available to those over 62 who had up to $12,000 in total household income during 1978.

Similar assistance is available to those who are qualified as disabled or blind regardless of age.

Those who wish to apply for the program cam get a claim form from the state by writing the Franchise Tax Board, P.O. Box 1588, Sacramento 05807. The person should state whether he or she is a homeowner or a renter.

"I would suggest that this be done right away since Aug. 31 is the filing deadline," Cory noted.

certain criteria. SMT Programs' contract specifies that they must be San Mateo County residents, 16 to 21 years old and economically disadvantaged.

But Holeman said he's convinced there are many more young adults who could qualify for the program if they knew about it.

Holeman said he thinks the CETA sub-contractor that's responsible for screening most applicants for his program is at fault.

CALLED the Youth Employment Program (YEP), it operates in-take centers throughout the county where young adults are tested, trained and referred to CETA programs like Holeman's.

YEP Director Desi Rodriguez said his centers have recruited 1,300 to 1,400 youths this summer.

Yet, the two job developers working for Holeman, Rita Lambert and Patrick Colgan, said YEP has referred only 35 applicants to San Mateo Training Programs this summer and that another CETA subcontractor sharing the screening responsibility — the East Palo Alto Youth Employment Service — has referred 26 applicants.

Mrs. Lambert and Colgan said they have found it much easier to work with the East Palo Alto subcontractor than with YEP.

Two more applicants were referred by yet another CETA subcontractor called Job Finders, but the job developers said they are "illegal," because CETA won't allow the two agencies to count the same youngsters twice.

Another two applicants contacted SMT Programs themselves after hearing advertisements on the radio.

The corporation has found jobs for 20 of the total of 65 youngsters referred and are sending 12 to interviews.

The job developers said the remaining 33 could not be placed for a variety of reasons, including:

- Seven never showed up for interviews with them or employers.
- Six left town before Mrs. Lambert and Colgan could place them.
- Four weren't eligible for permanent jobs; they were planning to return to colleges out of town in the fall.
- Two already had jobs when they were referred.
- Three had serious problems with the law that employers could not overlook.
- Eight were referred to other YEP programs.

According to Mrs. Lambert, most of the youths referred to them have "low employability quotients" that have made it nearly impossible to place them.

SHE EXPLAINED that many don't even know how to fill out an application blank. "They would lie on the applications, change dates and pad their qualifications. Naturally companies who verified the applications wouldn't hire them," she said.

Colgan recalled how he sent one youngster to the main Wells Fargo Bank building in downtown San Francisco for an interview.

"He told me the building had moved. I had just been there the week before and I knew he was trying to cover up the fact that he never made it to the interview, but he kept insisting the building wasn't there."

He and Mrs. Lambert found the applicants had better luck when they personally chauffered them to interviews.

"I got to one house to take this girl to an interview and when she answered the door, she was flopping around in a bathrobe," Colgan said. "She said she had no stockings to wear to the interview and asked, 'Will you take me to the store?' Then, when we got there, she asked, 'Will you pay for these?'"

The job developers also went out of their way to find the kind of jobs youngsters wanted. They even found the perfect job for one girl who said she wanted to learn land surveying. She's earning $5 per hour to start and the company is teaching her drafting and mechanical drawing for two hours per day.

But Mrs. Lambert and Colgan said their special efforts didn't always pay off.

THE MOST overwhelming problem was the youngsters' low level of academic achievement. The job developers estimated that most of the applicants read and write at the junior high level and 4 to 5 percent are illiterate.

One of the few applicants who scored high on all the tests never made it through their program.

Colgan said the young woman had interviewed for a job with a bank and was scheduled to begin work within a few days when he ran into her at the county CETA office in Redwood City.

What was she doing there? "She was working there. They had snatched her up for themselves," he said.

Colgan and Mrs. Lambert said many of their charges have such difficulties as excessive absenteeism and tardiness after they are hired because they are not prepared for the work environment. Unfortunately, some quit after the first few days on a job.

"I'm sure we're not the only ones encountering these problems," Mrs. Lambert said. "It's an attitude that goes beyond what we're trying to accomplish with this program — the attitude that 'someone will take care of me.'"

She and Colgan said they felt bad for the youngsters who keep failing to land jobs because they believe the youths begin to think of themselves as losers.

"These kids need help. There should be another program to give them the basic training they need," Colgan declared.

Rodriguez said YEP is providing that kind of help through another CETA program called "Job Factory," which teaches youngsters job-hunting skills.

He said he suggested to the county that it tie in the Job Factory with Holeman's program but the county vetoed his idea.

He was adamant that YEP has fulfilled its part of the agreement it has with the county and SMT Programs.

Rodriguez said YEP was required by its contract to refer only 38 youths to Holeman's program and actually referred 56 whom he called the "cream of the crop."

HOWEVER, he said SMT Programs turned down some referrals and failed to land jobs for many that it did accept. As a result, Rodriguez said YEP has decided not to refer any more youngsters to SMT Programs.

He said he tried to persuade the county not to fund Holeman's program, because the county already has a similar job placement and training program operating on a year-round basis.

Holeman's program was the only summer program funded in the on-the-job training category.

"I told the prime sponsor (the county) that an on-the-job training program designed for the summer is not a good idea...It takes time to work with these youths. You're not going to do much over a one- or two-month period. That's why we have the year-round program," Rodriguez said.

He added that he thinks another problem is that the administrators of Holeman's program "did not know the type of kids they were going to be dealing with. Economically and socially disadvantaged kids don't have the kinds of skills these people were used to working with."

Rodriguez said the corporation misunderstood the purpose of an on-the-job training program.

"It's not supposed to place people in entry-level positions. It's to prepare someone for an entry-level position," he said.

Virginia Rebata, coordinator of the central and coastside YEP offices, said Holeman "is the only person who was unable to work with YEP and the county CETA office this summer — the only program that could not place kids. I don't think he was prepared to deal with the type of kids referred...but, also, to be fair to him, I think the program he proposed to do was a very, very difficult one."

Mrs. Lambert and Colgan said they followed YEP's advice and sought out jobs for their applicants with less demanding qualifications, but still have difficulty placing the youths.

There were other problems, too. One was the seven-page, single-spaced contract that the county insisted all companies sign before hiring an applicant through the program.

MOST COMPANIES balked at the clause allowing the county to audit their books.

After much discussion, Holeman said the county agreed to substitute the lengthy contract with a condensed, two-page version that contains the same requirements but is less overwhelming in appearance.

Changing would-be employers' pre-conceived notions about CETA is proving to be a more difficult task.

Colgan said, "In the beginning, we had to talk up a storm simply because we used the words 'CETA' and 'federal government.' As soon as we did, doors slammed shut. Companies said they didn't want to have anything to do with CETA. But we've managed to open them up one at a time. We've made friends."

Holeman said he and his employees have not yet solved their communications problems with both YEP and the county CETA office. They complained that their CETA "contacts" are never available when they phone them, don't return phone calls and never seem to stay in the same job very long.

John Wallace, acting deputy director of the county's CETA staff, said those complaints are "typical of an understaffed, overworked group of people."

Wallace portrayed SMT Program difficulties as "inevitable problems of a pilot project."

He attributed most of them to a "slight dispute" between YEP and Holeman as both tried to work together for the first time.

Wallace was dismayed that attention is being focused on Holeman's program, because, he said, it comprises only about 4 percent of the county's entire CETA-funded Summer Youth Employment Program, which aims to serve 1,100 persons.

He predicted an extremely high success rate for participants in the summer program this year, estimating that 60 to 70 percent of those seeking jobs will find them.

THAT PREDICTION is a far cry from the results of last year's program. In 1978, San Mateo County's $1.2 million CETA-funded summer youth employment program found permanent job for a mere 10 out of the 1,900 youngsters it served.

An investigation by the U.S. government's General Accounting Office revealed similarly dismal results across the nation for the $755 million program last year.

This county responded by greatly increasing the vocational training emphasis in its summer employment program this year.

Wallace said a representative from the U.S. Department of Labor who came from Washington, D.C., to monitor the program called San Mateo County's program this year a "model program."

HE NOTED that the county is required by the federal government to build requirements into CETA contracts with businesses, such as the clause permitting audits.

And Wallace stressed that the county office has bent over backward trying to resolve problems mentioned by Holeman.

Two weeks ago, Wallace said the county gave Holeman permission to recruit his own applicants and the results are promising.

"It is interesting that Spencer (Holeman) seems to be coming up with the numbers," Wallace mused.

Holeman said the only concession the county made was to give him $300 to pay for 10 radio spot-advertisements to promote his program. The ads resulted in three phone calls; two of the youngsters who called were eligible.

Since YEP refuses to screen any more youngsters, Holeman said his job developers had to drive one youth all the way from Daly City to the East Palo Alto Youth Employment Service.

BUT TIME is running out for SM Training Programs which, ironically, has more jobs than ever, and Holeman still isn't sure the corporation will find enough applicants to break even this summer.

He has visions of running other CETA programs and knows his chances will be minimized if this endeavor fails.

Things have gotten so desperate that Colgan said, "It's getting to the point where when I see a kid walking down the street, I want to put a bag over his head and grab him."

NSMCSD's continuing nightmare

Straightening accounts for the North San Mateo County Sanitation District has become a bookkeeper's nightmare of some magnitude.

The district Board of Directors Monday approved a re-billing of some 2,100 customers whom the records show were undercharged during the 1978-79 fiscal year. District Manager Peter Arcluleta said the undercharges could be as much as $125,000.

But first the busy district accounting staff must finish refunding some $400,000 to most of its 22,000 customers who were overcharged last year.

That project began in January with a customer-by-customer review of the records, proceeded through the mailing of most of the checks this spring and summer, and now is winding down to the "hard cases," Arcluleta's term for those property owners and former residents who paid the fees in question but who now can't be located so their refunds can be paid.

The undercharges were found during the reconciling of the accounts, Arcluleta said. Most of the district's customers were billed 88 cents per 100 cubic feet of water used last year because some charges were added erroneously. The rate should have been the board-authorized 59 cents, it was determined.

Arcluleta said no date has been set yet for mailing of the new undercharge notices, and figured it may be this fall. The notices will inform customers that they may appeal, he noted.

In other business, Arcluleta told the board he is talking with engineers about preliminary costs for designing and building air-tight covers over the sewage treatment plant's three clarifiers as a means of stopping odors from the plant.

Residential neighbors have been complaining for many months about the smell, and the district staff has tried everything it could think of to try to control it, but with little success.

DC man sentenced

A 23-year-old Daily City security guard was sentenced to prison today for 15 years to life for a murder he steadfastly maintains he didn't commit.

Superior Court Judge Robert D. Miller imposed sentence on Craig Johnson. A jury convicted Johnson of second-degree murder last month for the death of Kristine Rosa last April 13.

I will fight this case all the way to the U.S. Supreme Court if I have to," Johnson is reported to have told Probation Officer John W. Ryan.

Johnson was a security guard at a dump near Brisbane last April 13 when he reported to police finding a body in the dump.

The investigation immediately focused on Johnson

Kitchen talk

By Nell Norton

Good morning, good cooks.

It's the memory of the dessert that lingers, and whatever the occasion every hostess likes to have that one special creation that elicits rave reviews from her guests and so much the better when her secret is the easy combination of kitchen-handy ingredients that result in a simply spectacular dessert.

Brandied Apricot Ring comes to the table as a picture of understated elegance. It can be prepared with ease and well in advance of company time. Using two packages of apricot flavor gelatin provides a warming mellowness and the refreshing taste of a tangy cool dessert. The striking two-layer mold is made with a mixture of the gelatin, canned apricots, brandy, water and whipped topping.

Use your prettiest dish to enjoy the striking effect of this dessert, and just before serving, spoon additional topping into the center of the mold or nest it in its own serving bowl.

BRANDIED APRICOT RING

1 can (16 oz.) apricot halves
2 packages (3 oz. each) apricot flavor gelatin
2 cups boiling water
¼ cup brandy*
1 container (4½ oz.) frozen whipped topping, thawed

*Or use ¼ cup water and ½ teaspoon brandy extract.

Drain the 16 ounces apricots, reserving syrup. Add water to syrup to make 1 cup. Cut apricot halves in half. Dissolve the two packages gelatin in the two cups boiling water. Add measured liquid and fourth-cup brandy. Chill until slightly thickened. Add the apricots to half the gelatin and pour into a 6-cup ring mold. Chill until set but not firm. Fold 1 cup of the whipped topping into remaining gelatin. Spoon into mold over clear layer. Chill until firm, about 4 hours. Unmold. Serve with remaining whipped topping. Makes 4½ cups or 8 servings.

SSF nursery school

Mom, child change roles

A South San Francisco nursery school features a unique approach to learning: the mothers are the students and their children the teachers.

It's part of a child-parent observation course in adult education offered at the Adult Education Building, corner of Spruce Avenue and Hillside Boulevard, South San Francisco.

The course is designed to help mothers — and sometimes fathers — determine what's normal about their children's play habits and perhaps what's not.

"We come into life, get married and everybody expects us to know how to raise a child," says teacher Carol Gerk.

After observing their children and other children, parents discuss their problems and the growth of their offspring.

The emphasis is on creativity — through dancing, singing, cooking, science projects, music and art.

The program attracts parents from San Mateo to San Francisco. A parent can attend class in the morning or in the afternoon. Most mothers attend twice a week, some four times.

The nursery school will accept children from the ages of 2-½ to 5. Infant care is provided for those mothers who have children in the nursery school but also have babies. The infant care aide is Rosalba Mercado.

Two other teacher aides assist the teacher in working with the children, Edelmira Gonzalez and Margo Barranti.

Anyone interested in the program can call 877-8844 or visit the class in rooms 11-14 of the Adul Education Building, Spruce Avenue and Hillside Boulevard.

Parking is provided behind the school and the entrance is off Hillside Boulevard.

Sept. 5 is th opening day of school.

Breathing course at church

A free health education program for people with diagnosed asthma, emphysema or chronic bronchitis will be each Tuesday and Thursday through next week at the San Bruno United Methodist Church, 560 El Camino Real, San Bruno.

Called "Home Health Care for Better Breathing," the course, from 1:30 to 3:30 p.m., is sponsored by the American Lung Association of San Mateo County.

Content includes how the lungs work, breathing techniques, nutrition, recognizing chronic obstructive pulmonary disease, bronchial hygiene, medications and exercises to decrease shortness of breath.

For further information and registration call the Lung Association at 349 - 1111.

Exclusive Key Buys Stretch Your Food Dollar's Value

What are "Key Buys"?

Manufacturers are willing to give supermarkets a temporary promotional allowance to help stimulate sales on certain products. All supermarkets are offered this allowance, but what makes the difference is that Lucky passes the allowances on to its customers in the form of lower prices. We call them "Key Buys" and they represent temporary promotional allowances or exceptional purchases, and normally carry a lower price than our everyday low price.

Key Buys Help Reduce Weekly Food Costs

Over the years, Lucky has led the food industry in developing ideas that mean value, quality, service, convenience, consistently low everyday prices and sensible programs like "Key Buys" to assist you in getting the best value for your food dollar. That's why smart thrifty shoppers rely on "Key Buys" to help maintain their budgets.

Free Weekly Valu-Finder Lists Additional Key Buys

When you shop Lucky, look for the Valu-Finder. It's a listing of additional "Key Buys" and new items that are currently available at Lucky. We don't have enough space in our weekly newspaper advertisements to list all our "Key Buys" or new items, so we publish a weekly listing called Valu-Finder to assist you in your shopping.

To simplify everything, we also place Valu-Finder tags on our shelves, calling attention to the items. The tags are color-keyed the same color as the Valu-Finder, so if you just want to shop the aisles, you still won't miss out on the savings.

They Mean Added Savings!

The "Key Buy" is highlighted with the symbol 🔑 and you'll find it on display signs as well as on the shelf while you shop. This is our way of letting you know of additional temporary savings available, so shop Lucky any day and look for "Key Buys". They mean added savings for you.

Lucky Shoppers Rely on Key Buys to Help Reduce their Weekly Food Costs..Why Don't You?

Knowing the Bard better

"Ain't nobody that kin say he's ben educated 'less he understands Shakespeare. Known' the bard is the highwater mark of refinement."
From Shakespeare in Hooten Hollow

Echoing the concept phrased by Hyrum Poore, but in more "high-falutin" terms, the American sage, Ralph Waldo Emerson, urged everyone to obtain a knowledge of the works of Shakespeare. "What point of morals, of manners, of economy, of philosophy, of religion, of taste, of the conduct of life," Emerson asks, "has he not settled?"

WITH THE same thought in mind, the poet, William Winter wrote, "There is not anything of human trial that ever love deplored or so now knew no glad fulfillment and no sad denial beyond the pictured truth that Shakespeare drew."

Shakespeare opens our mind to the life that spins around us. Like us, his characters are caught up in a chaotic swirl of events and, like us, sometimes they win the battle of life and sometimes they lose. Often they are destroyed by the flaws that exist in their own characters. Sometimes, however, they are saved from dire calamities by sheer luck.

Shakespeare created over 1000 characters and placed them in the real world. They are wordly wise. Mistress Quickly, for example, who stands ready to sue everyone who crosses her path. She feuds with neighbors, bullies employees and yet falls a victim to a "sweet-talking man."

There is Orlando, the handsome athlete, who is bullied by his brother and bothered by the girl he is too shy to woo. Through life he moves from one event to another, rarely trying to shape his own destiny and never realizing that his associates are shaping it for him.

There is Oswald, "a serviceable villain" who is "sweet faced" to those who seem to be losing it.

There is Julia, who seems "ready to give up everything for love" but knows when to "give a gentle kiss" and how to avoid "each weary step," until she achieves her aims.

OF SUCH characters it has been said that the readers and theater patrons are scarcely aware of the dividing line between the real people and those who come from Shakespeare's fancy. For this reason we of the real world oftimes, as the critic, Peter Quennell observes, discuss Shakespeare's characters as we discuss our friends and enemies. We speak of Hamlet and Romeo and Shylock as though they were real people. We adopt Shakespeare's picture of such historical characters as Cleopatra, Richard III and Macbeth, never once questioning their integrity.

To make reading Shakespeare an experience that never can be forgotten, Peter Quennell and Hamish Johnson have produced a book entitled "Who's Who In Shakespeare" (Morrow, $14.95). Here is a volume that takes the characters one by one and discusses their personalities and their significance in the plays in which they appear.

NO CHARACTER is too great to be analyzed in Quennell's and Johnson's book, and none are too insignificant. To add to the enjoyment of the book, there are hundreds of pictures that have been chosen carefully to show how competent actors portrayed Shakespeare's characters.

Surely, "Who's Who In Shakespeare" is a valuable book and should be read by the hundreds of readers who should be reading Shakespeare until they have experienced every one of the 39 plays he wrote.

JESD restores cut items

Several items were restored to the 1979-80 budget, a large number of administrative positions filled and a group of special education and support positions authorized by the Jefferson Elementary School District Board of Trustees at a special session Monday night.

Because of potential budget cutbacks, a large number of district personnel had been given tentative dismissal notices, but now that their positions have been funded, they had to be re-hired legally. These included six administrators and six supervisors of various district services and educational programs, who have been on the job and stay where they are.

Authorizations to hire personnel for nine programs, including nursing, special education, gifted children, and library, reading, art and music, were approved, with specific assignments to be made at 8 tonight at the regular board meeting at the district office, 101 Lincoln Ave., Daly City.

Lefty Gomez — he feels great after surgery

As I've always said, what's a baseball season without a column on Lefty Gomez? So I called him at his Fairfax home last week and asked him how he was feeling, not small talk but a significant question in Lefty's case, because the Yankee Hall of Famer underwent open heart surgery last year.

"If I had known I was gonna feel this good," retorted Lefty, his delivery not unlike a Henny Youngman opener, "I would have had the operation when I was two years old."

In other words, Lefty, who now walks four or five miles a day (more than he ever did as an active athlete), feels fine, so fine that he has trouble getting sympathy from anyone.

"PEOPLE meet me and they say, 'Gee, Lefty, I've never seen you look so good.' And then I show them my Medical Alert bracelet."

Gomez, now 69, is actually only five pounds over his heaviest playing weight of 168. When he broke in with the Seals in 1929, of course, he weighed only 146. "And that was newspaper talk."

Actually, the Yankees purchased him at mid-season that year but allowed the Seals to keep him so he would gain experience and weight. He got the experience, but not the weight.

After his first year with the Yankees, which included a trip to St. Paul in the American Association, they told him that he wasn't big enough, so they sent him to a Saratoga, N.Y. health farm, where he stayed for the better part of a month, going to bed at 9, getting up at 7, and drinking three and four quarts of milk a day.

"I DRANK so much milk, I'd see a cow out in the field and I'd start mooing at it like a starving calf."

Lefty didn't put on a lot of weight, but the next year he won 21 games.

Unfortunately, his little bit of extra heft did not help his hitting, the lack of which has become legendary (his lifetime batting average was .147), mainly propagated by Gomez.

"Pitchers in general in those days were better hitters," claims Gomez, "because managers gave them more batting practice. In my case, it didn't do any good, because while the rest of my body took batting practice, my right foot stayed in the dugout."

Le Pacini

BECAUSE GOMEZ stayed close to baseball as a representative of Wilson Sporting Goods until his retirement, he's not one of those oldtimers who can find the good of baseball only in the past, but he was quite impressed with the attitude of Yankee ace Ron Guidry early in the year when the young south-paw volunteered to go to the bullpen after relief ace Rich Gossage had injured his pitching hand.

"I see nothing wrong with starting pitchers relieving occasionally if the team needs them," says Gomez, who, along with another Hall of Fame Yankee, Red Ruffing, used to do it. "A lot of starters did that. Of course, in those days there would only be one relief pitcher, as such, on the staff.

"As long as you're going to pitch batting practice a couple of days after you start, anyway, there's no reason why you can't pitch to one or two batters in a game. The only thing you wouldn't want to do is to be up and down, warming up the whole game."

ASIDE from the way pitchers hit and relieve, Gomez has little to quarrel about with more modern baseball, because he thinks conditions are so much better, particularly in scheduling and traveling arrangements.

He remembers once in the Coast League when the Seals played Los Angeles on a Sunday, immediately after the game the team caught a train and traveled until noon Tuesday, arrived in Seattle, got off the train, and went to the park for that afternoon's game.

Once, in the big leagues, they played doubleheaders four straight days.

"ALL I ever remember being in that week was my pajamas and my baseball uniform, and come to think of it, they may have been one in the same."

Well, there is one thing about some of the current players which irks Lefty. That's when they say that "winning isn't everything."

"I never knew of anything better," says Lefty.

AS OF THIS DATE, only Greg Minton, Gary Lavelle and Tom Griffin, among Giants pitchers, have given up fewer hits than innings pitched.

The records of Lavelle and Griffin, incidentally, illustrate how fine an edge there is between truly effective relief pitching and just fair relieving.

As this was written, Lavelle had appeared in six more games and thrown just four more innings than Griffin. He had allowed seven more hits, one more walk, and struck out just four fewer batters than Griffin. Yet, Lavelle had a 7-5 record with 13 saves and an ERA of 2.13, while Griffin was 4-5, two saves and 3.63.

In relief pitching, one bad pitch a month can bloat an earned run average, lose a game or foul up a save, and make a manager timid to throw you out there in the same situation again.

AND SPEAKING of comparing relief pitchers, are there any two pitchers from each league in the history of baseball who ever have had better seasons at this point than the Cubs' Bruce Sutter and Texas' Jim Kern? It's hard to compare their records against each other at the time of this study (Sutter was 4-3 with 23 saves and an ERA of 1.29, while Kern was 10-2, 18 and 1.34) in total numbers because Kern is trotted out roughly 25 per cent more often than Sutter. But consider their respective performances in terms of each nine innings pitched:

Sutter is allowing just 4.57 hits, striking out 9.86 and walking exactly 3. Kern allows only 6.15 hits, strikes out 9.14, walks 3.56.

AN ODDITY of 1979: Not one player from either USC or Arizona State made the collegiate baseball All-American team.

NOW THAT Edward "Too Tall" Jones apparently is about to be joined in the ring by Lyle "Too Stupid" Alzado, we can picture the first Defensive End Championship of the world.

Alzado waits calmly in his corner, his wife feeding him sugar cubes (he IS a Bronco, isn't he?), while Jones is gulping french fries and Gatorade.

They meet in the center of the ring as the referee flips a coin to see who will get to throw the first punch.

Alzado is horrified when Jones wins the toss and "Too Stupid" discovers that he is not going to be allowed to wear his face mask.

THE BELL rings and they both lurch into three point stances.

Jones moves stealthily around Alzado, looking like a black Primo Carnera, floating like a paperweight, stinging like a noodle.

Alzado suddenly hits Jones with a jarring tackle that knocks him out of the ring, and Alzado draws a 15-yard penalty, which puts him out of the ring, too. The fight ends in a draw, with both fighters languishing in ringside seats.

Not satisfied with the decision, they ask for an instant replay, which they can't get, because Pete Rozelle has sold the rights for $1 million to Irwin Allen to screen as a disaster movie.

Coach won't compare title teams

By MIKE FICHER

It was Saturday, a non-playing day for the undefeated Daly City Flying Goose baseball team in the State Joe DiMaggio tournament at Fairfield.

For young men away from home, usually such an occasion calls for a day of shenanigans, playing tourist, or lounging around the hotel pool enjoying an occasional swim.

"I told them to enjoy themselves, if they went swimming to be careful," coach Tom King said. "But only one or two even went swimming."

As one player aptly stated, "We can go swimming next week. We have a tournament to win this week."

The no-nonsense Daly City squad blitzed over four opponents in the week-long double elimination tournament, claiming their second state title in four years with a record-breaking 25-7 pummeling of the Napa Moose Lodge in Sunday's championship clash at Allen Witt Park.

"They came out Sunday with the intention that they did not want to play two games," King said. "Everybody was ready to go. They wanted to play baseball."

And they did.

Daly City established a single-game scoring record with the 25-run outburst against Napa (the old record was 16) and a total tournament scoring record with 51 tallies in four contests. The championship also marked the North Peninsula's fifth state title in the past decade (Pacifica won in 1970 and Millbrae copped consecutive titles in '73 and '74, in addition to three second place finishes.

Flying Goose wasted little time in getting down to business, plating five runs in the first inning and scoring a tournament record 13 runs in the second to overpower Napa.

Dave Maxion ripped the first pitch of the game for a single, and then stole second base. Greg Funk, a post-season roster addition, drew a walk and John Grealish deposited the first pitch he saw over the centerfield fence for a towering 385-foot home run. Tourney Most Valuable Player Don Feblowitz added a RBI double and Doug Price capped the inning with a sacrifice fly.

Maxion ignited the second inning uprising with a double, and scored as Funk was hit by a pitch and Grealish and Greg Eagleton drew walks. Feblowitz, another DC roster addition, unloaded a 410-foot grand slam home run over the leftfield fence to virtually close the door on Napa.

Roger Homer stroked a RBI single and Funk and Grealish received run-producing walks to push across three more. Price ended the assault with a bases-clearing double to right center.

Price finished the contest with seven RBI, adding a two-run double in the third inning and a run scoring single in the fifth.

In addition to Feblowitz' MVP honor, five other DC players earned All-Tournament recognition. Frank Regello, the winning pitcher in the title game, pitcher Don Parks, centerfielder Price (.583), second baseman Funk, and designated hitter Homer (.545) merited places on the star squad.

King, whose club was making its fourth tourney appearance of the decade, was reluctant to compare this year's club to the 1976 title team.

"It is hard to really compare the first title with this one," he said. "I believe you can't compare two types of teams but the '76 team was a miracle team. Even I didn't realize how many guys would go on to play college ball.

"But this time we knew we had the talent. With (Jeff) Dietrich, Regello, and Parks, we had three excellent starting pitchers, all bound for college. And we had Rich Baxley. From the fifth inning on, the starters know they can win with a guy like that in the bullpen. He is a tough guy who has a lot of guts."

Baxley, who appeared in all four tourney victories, hurled a scoreless seventh inning to preserve the win.

Flying Goose finished the season with a 35-9 record, including 10 consecutive post-season wins on their way to the state title.

Julia Wiley conquers Pike's run

Julia Wiley of San Bruno calls herself a "masochist," and judging on her running history, she may be right.

The 42-year-old runner recently placed first in the 40-49 division of the Pike's Peak Marathon near Colorado Springs, completing the grueling 28.2-mile round-trip in six hours, 10 minutes and 30 seconds.

That was good for 183rd overall among all the runners and sixth best among women, earning her two gold buckles for the day. Julia was fourth in her age bracket in the ascent, 27th best among the 150 women runners.

Kathleen Secrest of Foster City was ninth in the 30-39 division and was first among the San Francisco Dolphin South End Runners. Secrest competed in the ascent only, clocking three hours, 52 minutes.

More than 1,000 runners were in the event, sanctioned as a marathon by the AAU because of the rugged trail and 7,000-14,000-foot elevation.

Wiley, a competitive runner for about two years, called the Pike's Peak run "unbelievable and treacherous," admitting she cried during the race several times and suffered a torn knee and other scrapes after falling during the descent.

"That downhill goes on forever," said Julia. "I never thought it would end."

Bobby Sox tourney

Miracles run out for Mateans

BUENA PARK — The miracle broke down.

After playing games that only angels could survive, the San Mateo Majors (ages 12-15) Bobby Sox softball all-stars dropped a 1-0 eight-inning decision to Bellflower Monday night.

It was their first loss after two wins in the double-elimination tournament that continues until Friday.

Pacifica was eliminated by Brea Hills, 2-0, earlier in the day.

San Mateo has lived and died by its defense all tournament and it was an unearned run in the top of the eighth inning that saw a fine pitching performance from Pam Gleason go to waste.

"We don't have any excuses tonight," said S.M. coach Rick Eymer. "We played like champions, but we couldn't hit the ball, and that's all there was to it."

San Mateo had its defense at work. In the first inning, Bellflower had runners on second and third with one out, but plays from the gloves of Sheila Conway and Terri Cannel wiped out the rally. Gleason kept the ball away from the power lanes and Bellflower could only swipe harmlessly at the ball. But the same could be said for San Mateo hitters.

San Mateo batters reached base about as often as Halley's Comet can be observed. Cindy Valdez was safe after a tough chance was bobbled by the Bellflower third baseman. Joani Wentworth singled for the lone SM. hit of the game. Those were the only baserunners San Mateo could come up with, and neither could get beyond first base.

"We didn't hit like we are capable of hitting," Eymer said. "But we have confidence in ourselves and we'll be right up there with the top teams. When you go extra innings, it's fair to say that a lucky bounce or a break is good enough to win it. That's what happened. But we're a good enough team to bounce back."

For Pacifica, it was a matter of trying to hit against the fastest pitcher in the tournament. Denise Munro, who struck out 24 S.M. batters in 14 innings in the opening round, only struck out 14 Pacifica batters in seven innings, but the performance was good enough to send Pacifica home.

The Pacifica all-stars were also bit by a defensive lapse. With two outs and a runner on second, a routine fly ball was hit to left field. But the ball popped out of the glove and the winning run scored.

"Hey, we were playing great defense all night," Pacifica coach Alex Dias said. "It was just a fluke play that let in the run."

With Pacifica now eliminated from the tourney, it leaves only Florin of Sacramento and San Mateo left as the sole representatives from Northern California.

San Mateo will get a day off today before facing the winner of the Westnon-Roseville game at 4 p.m. on Wednesday.

Group works for education and good health

Perspective

By ARVILLE FINACOM

Lazy, late August days mark the end of summer vacation for many. For some, they point toward the start of a very special experience — beginning school for the .irst time.

To help guarantee that all children make their first contact with formal learning in the best health possible, the Child Health and Disability Prevention Program operates in California.

IN EARLY summer I talked with Elise Stone, health educator for San Mateo County's CHDP program and Geralyn Harder, its deputy director, about activities locally. At the time they were readying a free CHDP brochure/fact sheet in anticipation of having it ready for distribution now to parents who may be interested in CHDP assistance.

Stone and Harder, along with the seven others in the county program, routinely involve themselves with such administrative details of the legislation which "provides the opportunity for children to seek and receive on-going, periodic, high-quality, preventive health care services."

But first a bit of background. Up until a very few years ago, most people visited a doctor or dentist only when they had a pain or ache. Except for military or job-required physicals, people rarely were examined when they were well. Health patterns for both adults and children depended on home remedies, even to the extent of ignoring a condition in hopes it would improve. Sometimes irreparable physical harm occurred before a physician's care was sought.

ALTHOUGH the immunization programs adopted widely a generation ago insured that a child would enter school protected against the more damaging communicable diseases, little emphasis was placed on regular health care. True, those belonging to such job-connected medical groups as Kaiser Permanente had a pattern for periodic checkups and continuing care spelled out for them. But the vast bulk of the population, especially those with limited economic means, continued to seek sick child care only in emergencies. Transience, too, played a part. A family on the move establishes few roots. Episodic, crisis-oriented health care becomes the rule.

In the 1960s, especially at the federal level, the move toward civil rights began to encompass as well health care and disability prevention. By the 1970s, senators Mondale and Kennedy were forefront fighters for universal protection for children.

Federal legislation in 1967, plus enabling state legislation in 1974, established the California CHDP program, which stipulates "high quality health care" for all children. Funded through Title 14 of the federal Social Security Act, children whose families are eligible for Medi-Cal can receive regular health examinations from birth through 20 years of age at no cost.

SOME ADDITIONAL low-income families are eligible for one free health exam prior to the time a child enters first grade. Such a pre-entry exam is required currently by California law. In addition, children enrolled in state pre-school and Head Start programs are eligible for a free checkup regardless of family income.

Although some California counties have their own health screening facilities, most Bay Area ones do not. The San Mateo County CHDP program is typical of these. In our county, 90 percent of all practicing pediatricians, as well as some internists, general practitioners and obstetricians, plus workers in public health and private free clinics, are tied into the CHDP network.

How do those eligible find out about the program? That's where the local office of CHDP assists.

Everyone who applies for AFDC (Aid to Families with Dependent Children) and Medi-Cal is asked if they are interested in preventive health care services for their children. Three CHDP eligibility workers, one fluent in Spanish, rotate among the four county intake centers (South San Francisco, San Mateo, Redwood City and East Palo Alto). Here they make as many face-to-face contacts with those who express interest as possible. If unable to meet in person, CHDP workers send information by mail or phone the applicants.

THE IMPORTANCE of continuing health care is stressed not only as a guarantee of good health but also of early detection of potentially serious and/or disabling conditions. Parents are encouraged to use their own source of health care; but, if the applicant has no regular doctor, CHDP workers suggest several within the network of participating clinics and physicians who agree to take eligible applicants on as regular patients.

Cornel Harper's title is "community worker." He assists with the case management function by visiting families to encourage their following through on further directions when a medical problem arises. He acts as liaison with other agencies, distributes brochures and posters to community centers and shopping areas and represents CHDP at some community meetings.

Actually, Harper, Stone and Harder share public relations duties. Stone, as health educator, also channels information about home safety, including poison control, car safety as it relates to small children, accident prevention in general, as well as toy safety. In the last field, Stone obtained information for distribution during last year's holiday season from the consumer Products Safety Commission office in San Francisco.

Office staff includes a staff clerk specialist who speaks Spanish as well as English, and two designated clerical workers.

PERHAPS the greatest challenge for CHDP is to get people used to the idea of "using the health care system appropriately," says Stone. Harder adds that "the concept of preventive health care is not universal," echoing her earlier comments that much of CHDP's work is "getting the word out" about the importance of early screening and continuing health evaluation.

How successful has CHDP been? Statistically, there is no way to judge accurately. About half of the 800 physical exams done monthly for those eligible in San Mateo County are repeat visits to the doctor. But no data has been assembled to show whether this is merely a statistical increase or whether it reflects a real interest in continuing health care.

I suppose the real measure of success is years away. When today's children are grown and parents themselves, if they accept the idea of on-going child health care and disability prevention as a necessity, then the mark done by CHDP staff will be justifiable. For further information about CHDP, call 573-2877.

Skinny Gourmet's nutritional food

The secret of preparing nutritional fresh vegetables and other healthy foods in tasty recipes accounts for the increasing popularity of THE SKINNY GOURMET restaurant in San Mateo. Salad bar with house dressing supplements the menu ... Seen enjoying an intimate candlelit dinner in the elegant Executive Room of PHIL LEHR'S Pay By-Ounce STEAKERY, on the lower level of the S.F. Hilton Tower, were newlywed KRON-TV newscasters Fred LaGasse and Terry Lowry ... Family gatherings and social parties are always welcome at ROMANO'S old-style Italian ristorante at Rockaway Beach, Pacifica. ENRICO ROMANO is happy to help with party arrangements ... A frequent visitor to JIM SNIADECKI'S SCOTTY CAMPBELL'S whenever she's in the Bay Area is recording star Erica Ereckson ... Gourmet dining is featured in the Constellation Room at RAY PLUNKETT'S TAHOE MARINER hotel and casino at North Lake Tahoe ... Hibachi style cooking at your table is featured at HANA JAPAN Japanese Steak House in San Mateo. For those who prefer the conventional style Japanese food service, DENNY YUNE and AKIO YOSHIDA offer a choice of service style ... Such is the fame of LA POTINIERE French restaurant: Three taxicabs full of guests from New York and staying at one of the big hotels in San Francisco trekked to San Mateo for dinner at ROGER NICOLAS' new location in the arcade complex known as "The Theater."

Extra: ... the smash hit music at the Orpheum Theater is duplicating its success at ROSEBUD'S ENGLISH PUB on San Francisco's Geary Street Theater Row ... where the Evita cocktail is winning enthusiastic encores from patrons ... With dinner, dancing and top-flight entertainment all under one roof, BIANCHINI'S in Daly City is a best bet for gas-conscious night owls. Feast on a hearty six-course Italian dinner for $5.50, then adjourn to the lounge, where SENTIMENTAL JOURNEY plays for dancing nightly from 7:30 p.m. On Mondays from 8:30 p.m., the Big Band Dance Party spotlights the JOHN COPPOLA and CHUCK TRAVIS ALL STAR BAND ... The fresh fruit luncheon salad at LEHR'S GREENHOUSE in San Francisco is a cornucopia of fresh fruits in season; just the thing for summertime appetites ... To many people who love authentic German home cooking, an important addition is real imported German beer ... and TILLIE'S LIL FRANKFURT in Moss Beach offers both "A Diet Special" (choice of hamburger patty or New York steak served with cottage cheese and sliced tomato) is a luncheon treat for calorie counters at BAYHILL LOUNGE in the Bayhill Shopping Center, San Bruno. Luncheon served from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. Mondays through Fridays.

Popular puppeteer back at Finocchio's

GEORGE BUCHANAN, the creative puppeteer who delights audiences with his personally hand-crafted puppets, has joined the star-studded cast of versatile performers at FINOCCHIO'S nightspot in San Francisco, who are dedicated to making your evening enjoyable. Four shows nightly (closed Mondays) ... There are facilities for everyone at VINCE'S Italian and Seafood Restaurant — from the lone diner who chooses the counter seating to the couples or groups who prefer the booths and tables ... The vine-covered, weathered-wood exterior of the historic CYPRESS HOUSE restaurant in Half Moon Bay is newly re-opened under the new ownership and management of HAEKUN CHOI ... Sweet and Sour is among the most favored categories of Chinese food at GONG'S Chinese restaurant in South San Francisco ... Children never go home empty handed at the LA PINATA in downtown Burlingame. All children dining at this family Mexican restaurant receive a free gift ... A huge fireplace enhances the elegant decor at the IRON GATE restaurant in Belmont ... An underwater window behind the bar in the Mermaid Room of the EL RANCHO INN restaurant, Millbrae, offers a clear view of the swimmers enjoying the Inn's pool ... Phil Harris and Lew Marsten were recent luncheon guests at OLIVER'S restaurant in San Francisco ... Although CHUCK'S STEAK HOUSE specializes in quality steaks, seafood fanciers appreciate their Alaskan King Crab, scampi and Combination Platter.

Roast beef on Friday nights and Chile Verde on Saturdays are a couple of new reasons for putting THE KING'S TABLE, NORM LARSON'S Redwood City restaurant, high on your list of places to visit ... "Touch dancing" has always been popular at NICK'S restaurant, lounge and entertainment center in Rockaway Beach, Pacifica. The JIMMY PAYER group provides a variety of "golden oldies" as well as popular standards, with dancing Wednesday through Sunday nights ... Much attention is given to the personal preferences of patrons dining and drinking at JOHN'S PLACE, the "working man's bar" in downtown Burlingame now celebrating its second year of successful operation ... A popular attraction at ALFREDO'S Italian restaurant in San Mateo is the Salad Bar. It's included on complete dinners. At luncheon, it can be enjoyed for a modest extra charge of $1.39 with any lunch order. Only $2.75 if all you want is the Salad Bar ... A superb "bill of fare" is offered in the elegant Barronshire Room of the SAN FRANCISCO AIRPORT HILTON, including an array of continental dishes, salads, soups and appetizers. Gourmet cooking becomes a dramatic affair at Dal Baffo restaurant in Menlo Park when owner/chef Vincenzo Lo Grasso prepares such epicurean specialties as Flambe Scampi.
